Arizona Court of Appeals, Div. One: Year in Review for 2010

In an effort to educate the community about its efforts, the Arizona Court of Appeals, Division One, annually issues its Year in Review report.

The document is created to inform the public about the court, its judges, and the cases that have come before the court during the calendar year. While not required to do so by law or court rule, the court publishes a report each year and posts online to better inform the public about the court and its vital role in Arizona's justice system.

"Most Arizonans might never find themselves before an appellate court and this document helps those who have interest in our work find information about what we do," stated Chief Judge Ann Scott Timmer. "For those who appear before our court and for our partner agencies in government, the review is a concise analysis of the work of the Arizona Court of Appeals, Division I."
